This shrub is one that is not well known and is very similar to yellow flowering brooms. Bright yellow pea like flowers are abundant on this green stemmed, low growing shrub. It is spiky and twiggy in texture with relatively small leaves. It produces a seed pod that is about 1/2" to 3/4" long.

This tough plant prefers hot sunny locations with relatively infertile soils. It will tolerate both acidic and alkaline soils and seems to be adaptable to urban conditions. It can be pruned after its initial blooming. You will find that it will continue to bloom sporadically through the growing season.
